Information about the duty to maintain data confidentiality

I was advised of the duty to maintain data confidentiality according to § 6 of the Data Protection Act North Rhine-Westphalia - DSG NW - dated June 9, 2000 (GV.NRW.S.542). According to § 6 DSG NW, it is forbidden to process or disclose protected personal data accessible in official capacity without authorization for a purpose other than for the respective lawful performance of the task; this continues to apply after the end of employment. I have been informed that violations of data confidentiality can be punished with imprisonment or a fine, particularly pursuant to § 33 DSG NW; this does not exclude disciplinary or labor law measures. In most cases, a breach of data confidentiality will at the same time constitute a breach of official confidentiality or a breach of the duty to maintain confidentiality, and may also constitute a breach of special confidentiality obligations.
